One of the best-written tales we have of primitive Yankee life and character."

In 'Twice Married' we have a natural, wholesome, healthy, and real New England story, told too, in the best of old Englain. Whoever has visited the quaint and quiet town of Windham will at once recognize the description of 'Walbury,' from the pleasent painting of the renery around about, even to the 'graven image of the chubby Bacchas, sitting astride upon a wine-cask,' up in the fork of the venery around about, even to the system of the chubby Bacchas, sitting astride upon a wine-cask, 'up in the fork of the venerable elemtree before the tavertideer. Hartford, too as it appeared tweety years 20, is well described, from the old 'Stage-House,' in State-at, to three packable Young Ladies' Establishment forme by kept by the Misses Primber. There are plenty of other places and people, two, in this story, at once recognizable. For the characters in 'Twice Married' are a left them of every-day Yankee life. There are plenty of Sweenys and Tablishs, and now and then a Deshiegh annipa Lucy Manners, and the stery is a reflex of country society and customs in Cennec loan as they were twenty years ago, and are to this day in localities not yet cut up by railroads.

"We have not read so pleasing and delightful a story from an Anerican subner for a long time. It has the real New England fregrence throughout. It is beautifully printed."

nature, and a segacious delineator of Yankeedom."

"The style of the author, is genial and attractive, and reminds us of the mooth and graceful style of Dietrich Kricker-bocker, the renowned author of the "Hatry of New-York," which has obteined such universal commendation. The characters are well-drawn, and Col. Manners and his wife, John Dashleigh, Lucy and Deacon Joab Sweeny, cannot fail to have an abiding-place to the semmery."

(Die Columbian, "Twice Martied" is truly a charming tale, as fresh and inspiring as the morning air in Connecticat measows. It is a genuine tale of Connecticut life as faithful as the best picture which Mr. Jude could draw."

"One of the most beautiful git-b-oks which has appeared this season—ene of the woat beau ifful indeed, that has ever appeared in any season—is a new edition of 'The Task' of Cowper, richy illustrated by Birket Foster." [Quarterly Review.

"Among the picturial gift-books of the season, the chief place belongs to the Binatrated Edition of Cowper's Task.' It is allogether a beautiful work, and one of percential value."

"We cannot conceive of any one leoking on the filustrations of 'The Task' without delight."

"We wonder what the bard of the Ouse would say to this exquisite action of his favorite poem, could be see it. Such a liever of nature as he was, how his eye would have lighted up at Mr. Foster's delicious bits of landscepe—simple, truthful, and poetical as the lines they illustrate!. We have often hal occasion to commend Mr. Foster's landscape compositions, but we have never seen his pencil more charmingly exercised than on this beautiful volume; nor must we exclude from our praises the work of Mr. E. Evans, who has engraved the designs on weed in a first rate style of excellence."

RS. CHILDO'S NEW BOOK

This day published:

PROGRESS OF RELIGIOUS IDEAS TEROUGH SUCCESSIVE AGES. By L Maris Child, surhor of "Philothes,"

"Letters from New York," &c. 3 vols. 12mo. 44

This work has cost the dislinguished author many years of labor and study. It will be found a concise and comprehensive account of re-igious opinions from the most sacient Hindoo records to the complete establishment of Caristianity. In her preface he remake:

"My motive in writing has been a very simple one: I wished to show that theology is not religion, with the hope that I might help to break down partition wals; to ameliorate what the eloquent Bushell calls 'haptised harreds of the hu man race."

To write with the unbiased justice at which I sused, I was obliged to trample under my foet the theological underbrush which always tangles and observets the path when the sonl attives to be guided only by the mild, bright star of religious sentiment. It is never pleasant to walk directly through and over the opinions of the age in which one lives. I have not done it saccastically, as if I deplied them; because such is not my feeling. I have done it in a straightforward, quiet way, as if I were unconceious of their existence. "The perfect openness with which I have revealed many particulars generally kept in the back-ground will trouble some devotional people, whose feelings I would not willingly wound. But I place great is tance on sincerity, and have strong faith in the power of cennine Christianity to stand on its own internal merite, unaided by concealment.

Politable dy CHAS, S, FRANCIS & Co., 252 Broadway. SPIRITUALISM SCIENTIFICALLY DEMON-N STRATED by Prof. ROBERT HARE of Philadelphia—
This is a book of 500 pages octavo, with engravings illustrating the machinery and muote employed to prevent the possibility of deception and to expose what the author then presumed was fallery, but his experiments resulted in the absolute demonstration of the existence of spirits and their communion with nertals.

Dr. Hare is associated with the Smithsenian Institute, a Professor of Chemistry, and stands, with Prof. Silliman, at the beac of the scientific classes. He is known wherever science is known in this country and in Europe. A scientific demonstration of immertality and commanion between the two worlds from such a source must score for this book a wide and general circulation. The book will be published on Monday, the 19th inst. Price $1.75-$2 with postage paid for 3,000 miles. The usual discount to the trade. Orders are being received by PARTRIDGE & BRIFIAN Pablishers.
